PMO MANAGED SERVICE LAYERS

When you want to focus only on your core business, Talentis is able to take full or part responsibility for your PMO, through on and off-site solutions.

We have structured our service delivery in the following layers:

Layer I – Support

This structure gives considerable authority to its project managers and project teams to enable them to deliver projects within estimates. There is no control over, or guidance offered to the project leaders, but support is provided through on going training, coaching, administrative requirements, and performance reporting.

Layer II – Control

Controlling services include periodic reviews, project audits, performance assessments, and sometimes, corrective action. This means that the PMO has direct influence over the projects, which may include risk management, quality standards enforcement, and communications channels.

Layer III – Direct

The directive PMO is a more authoritative structure providing not only project support and controlling, but is also fully responsible for the day-to-day management of approved processes.

Layer IV – Improve

This approach encompasses the best practices of the other three structures, and encourages others. Here we focus on increasing throughput and reducing cycle time as opposed to cost containment and rigid performance schedules. This is especially aimed at a more business led projects or complex program activity and would encompass implementation and change.
